Want the best of BuzzFeed Animals in your inbox? Sign up for a newsletter today! TikTok is the entertainment app that has Snapchat innovates to keep up, and even inspires the creation of a new phone. Somewhat reminiscent of the now-defunct Vine, the free app focuses on short, music videos created by users. If you're just in for the lolz, you can scroll through millions of videos uploaded by other users, or you can get creative and make your own. Here's how to get started with TikTok. Starting If you're a video connoisseur but not necessarily a creator, getting started is easy. Just download TikTok on iOS and Android. Then open the app. On the main screen will be a popular video to watch. If you don't like the offer, swipe up to go to the next video. You can also rate, comment, and share the video using the icons on the right side of the screen. You can also browse popular videos and search for keywords or hashtags to find videos you like by tapping the Search icon at the bottom of the screen. Do you feel creative? Tap the Me icon in the lower-right corner of the screen, and then create an account using the on-screen instructions. Now you can create videos by tapping the + icon on the I screen. Also, on the Me screen, you can see how many likes and followers you have. Create videos All videos in TikTok last 15-60 seconds (you can select the timeout by selecting the option under the record button), so you may want to design your video just before you start. When you're ready, tap the + icon on the I screen. From there, the video shooting screen will appear. You may notice that in addition to the red burn button, there are many other icons. Here's what they do: Effect icon: This icon is a square smiley face on the left bottom of the screen. Tap it and choose from a menu of special effects that can be used in your video, such as bright snow, black and white movie effects, and interactive effects that change when your body moves during filming. Photo templates: This option is located under the recording button and allows you to upload your photos to a creative video gallery with music. Select your template by swiping to the left, and then tap the Select Photos button to upload your photos. Add audio: At the top of the screen, you'll find Add audio. Tap to find a song to add to your video. You can also use this option to save songs for later You have no idea what song you want to use? Press the Discover a sound button in the middle of the Add audio screen for inspiration. Flip: Flip does exactly what he says, flips the camera between front and back to front. Speed: The speed icon lets you control how fast or slow your video is. Jack it at high speed or slow down to maximize laughs. Beauty: This icon allows you to add a beauty filter to your video. Tap the icon to turn it on and tap it again to turn it off. Filters: The Filters icon lets you add filters to the video, as with any other video application. Timer: Want a smaller video? The timer lets you adjust how long you want your video to last. Use the slider to select how many seconds the video will record before automatic shutdown. Flash: Pressing the Flash icon to turn the flash on and off on your camera. When you're done filming, tap the red check mark. You will then be taken to an edit screen. Here you can add filters, stickers, change effects and sounds, and add text to the video. After editing, press next. On this new screen, you can describe your video, add hashtags, tag friends, turn off comments, share the post, change privacy settings, and save it as a clipboard. Advanced tricks Once you get used to the basics, you can do more creatively. For example, there's a Duet feature where you can combine your video with friends. All you need to do is have your friend send you their video. Open it on the Inbox screen, and then tap the Share icon and duet icon. If you're in special effects, you'll probably like the Green Screen tool. Select the Effects icon on the video screen, and in the Trends section, tap the #greenscreen. From there, you can add any photo from your phone to use as a background in your video. One user used the green screen effect to pose with a shark, for example. How to change the privacy of your videos Sometimes you don't want people looking at your videos, especially when you're just getting started. You can change who can see each video quite easily. For videos you've already uploaded, tap the Share icon, and then who can see this video and select Private. If you want to choose who sees it before you post the video, just choose Who can see that video, and then tap Private on the save and share screen when you post the video. If you're curious about TikTok privacy issues and protection here's everything you need to know. Editor Recommendations If you are an avid TikToker, you have probably come across bunny, talking dog, on your page for you. The viral sensation has drawn in over 5 million followers who watch the sheepadoodle simulate conversations with her man with a mixture of awe and disbelief. If you're not known, Bunny won't talk. Instead, she seems to be deliberately dealing with a pillow of buttons that have pre-recorded audio commands from her owner, such as Walking or Park or I Love You, Mom. While Bunny is not vocalizing man, she seems to communicate, blowing everyone's mind on the internet - and of course, raising eyebrows from skeptics. Although it may seem like a backup for TikTok, the communication system that Bunny uses isn't exactly new. Alexis Devine, Bunny's man, first came across the soundboard two years ago when she learned about speech-language pathologist Christina Hunger's work. Using a similar device, Hunger was able to teach Stella's puppy to communicate. Devine knew he wanted to experiment with this form of communication communication Before Bunny came into her life. I felt like there's no reason to bring a creature into your home if your plan isn't to build and excellent relationship with them, Devine tells Bustle. How Bunny the Dog learned to Talk When Devine brought Bunny home in the summer of 2019, he was interested in being able to bridge the gap between human and dog understanding and give Bunny tools to express pain, which he thought could lead to better veterinary care. The system started with a simple external button from the door. Devine planned to see how Bunny physically interacted with the button, and whether Bunny could infer that pressing the button meant he could go out. If the puppy wasn't interested in the button, Devine wouldn't break it. But when Bunny started using the button regularly, Devine knew the soundboard had potential. One by one, Bunny learned the buttons from Devine responding to her commands: if Bunny tapped the water button, for example, Devine would fill her water bowl. It's a mutually beneficial system, says Devine. He knows using the buttons pleases me - he knows if he asks for a ride and I hear it, he is pleased. Bunny has since enrolled in an open research study at the Comparative Cognitive Function Laboratory at the University of California, San Diego, led by Federico Rossano and Leo Trottier, which aims to find out if dogs are actually communicating using these soundboards, and if so, how. People are skeptical of what's going on, and so am I, says Devine, acknowledging critics who often leave comments in her videos deeming them fake or misleading. Devine explains that right now, there's no evidence to say that what's happening with Bunny is more than operant conditioning, a pattern of behavior that focuses on reward rather than cognitive understanding of what's going on. That means Bunny can press the I Love You button, Mom, because that leads to a warm reaction from Mom, not because she actively expresses love. Still, Rossano and Trottier are just as adhering as the internet is in Bunny's rapid adoption of the communication system. While the team works with hundreds of dogs, Bunny's performance stands out as exemplary, says Trottier at Bustle. And although he is open to the idea that the Sheepadoodle breed might be the perfect combination of people-pleasing (sheep dog) and smart (Poodle), he attributes Bunny's success to Devine's commitment to the project. How Bunny The Dog's Soundboard worksYes the open study does not yet have enough information to draw definitive conclusions, the working theory is that dogs are able to learn the position of buttons and their meanings. Dogs can learn up to 1,000 words, this Trottier says. Dogs already communicate key command words, such as walk or water when they stand near their leash or gesture in their water cup, Trottier says. What is different, and still TBD, is whether or not dogs can tie together the more complex formulation, such as Walk tomorrow? Or come on, Mom, and it really means what they say. We know that animals can basically communicate about things in their immediate environment, and while we don't know if they can do more sophisticated things, there is suggested evidence that language skills are way beyond what we thought, says Trottier. The more language resources dogs have, the more increased their thought process can become, he adds. But he's talking? This dog communicates with its owners, says Erin Askeland, G.B.C.C.-KA, C.P.D.T.-KA, an animal health and behavior consultant at Bow Wow Camp. But that's kind of normal. To be clear, communication is part of training and living with a dog - they don't inherently know what words mean until they attach words to behavior, actions, or data and this is done through preparation, Askeland, who is not affiliated with the study but who has observed TikTok Bunny's viral video, says. Can any dog learn to talk? If you're watching these videos and wondering if your dog is too old to learn a new trick, you may be inspired to learn that the researchers involved in this study don't rule out any candidates. When it comes to cognitioin, anything is possible, says Trottier. It depends on how much work you can put in – younger dogs that haven't shaped their ideas on how to interact with the world are much easier to train. While it's impressive to see this kind of behavior, Askeland says teaching a dog to communicate complex concepts is not a simple task and probably not for any pet owner. Buttons or not, Askeland says it's a dog owner's duty to create some kind of communication. The dogs are already communicating with us. It's up to us to figure out what they're saying, and that's another way a dog can do it. Although Trottier expects to see some trends in breeds as the study progresses, he is confident that any dog that is young, or interested in the pleasure of its owner, is a good candidate for the practice. Devine says that her ability to communicate more deeply with Bunny has strengthened their bond. It's like no other connection I've ever had, he says. It teaches me so much about kindness and listening better to other people, giving them space to respond, and being kinder to myself.
